About Rainshadow Organics

Sarahlee Lawrence didn't intend to become a farmer even though she grew up on a 200 acre hay and cattle farm in Terrebonne. She left home in her 20s and was a professional raft guide for 10 years before getting her Masters and returning to help out on the family farm. Instead of growing hay, she wanted to grow food for her friends and family. Now years later, Sarahlee and her husband, Ashanti, farm 27 irrigated acres with 17 greenhouses, raise turkeys, pigs and grow and mill their own whole wheat flour. Join them for one of their famous long-table dinners and purchase from their beautiful farm store.

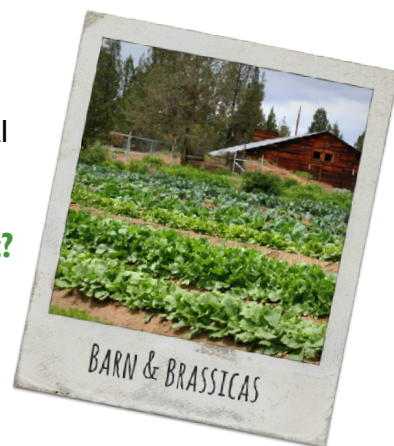

"Being part of growing food is magic."

Was farming in your family?

"My dad grew hay and raised cattle. This is the work ethic I was bred for but in terms of the family farm for the next generation, it is critical that someone takes it over."

What makes your operation different?

"Rainshadow Organics is a full diet farm that grows and raises meat, grains and vegetables. Diversity is key."
